I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff States<sup>1</sup> and the Certified Class<sup>2</sup> (“Plaintiffs”) respectfully submit this Memorandum in Support of their Motion for Preliminary Approval of their settlement with Apple Inc. (“Apple”). Plaintiffs strongly believe this Court’s liability finding against Apple should, and will, be affirmed. If it is affirmed and if this settlement is approved, compensation for E-book purchasers will total $566 million: $400 million from Apple and $166 million already recovered from the publishers in earlier settlements.<sup>3</sup> This outcome would represent a consumer recovery of more than 200 percent of the maximum estimated consumer damages,<sup>4</sup> placing this case among the exceedingly rare cases that provide consumers nationwide with double the amount of their estimated damages.

Recognizing the effect of this Court’s finding that Apple conspired to restrain trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act<sup>5</sup> (“Liability Finding”) and Apple’s appeal therefrom, the parties have fashioned a settlement that provides for three outcomes, depending on the resolution of the appeal. First, if the Court’s Liability Finding is ultimately affirmed, Apple will pay $400 million to consumers (and $50 million more in attorneys’ fees and payment to States). Second, if the Liability Finding is either vacated and remanded or reversed and remanded for

<sup>2</sup> “Certified Class” means Consumers in any State, Commonwealth or Territory of the United States, other than Plaintiff States, at the time of their E-book purchase as defined in the Order certifying class which was entered on March 28, 2014 (In re Electronic Books Antitrust Litigation, No. 11-md-02293 (S.D.N.Y.), ECF No. 585) (“Class Certification Order”).

<sup>3</sup> This amount does not include payment of attorneys’ fees and costs and payment to the States, all of which are being paid in addition to the consumer compensation and all of which represent an additional benefit Plaintiffs have secured on consumers’ behalf.

reconsideration or retrial on the merits, Apple will pay $50 million to consumers (and $20 million more in attorneys' fees and payment to States). Third, if the Liability Finding is reversed, Apple will make no payments for consumer compensation, for attorneys' fees or to Plaintiff States.

This settlement potentially provides for exceptional consumer recovery and ensures an efficient use of judicial resources. It allows Apple to press its positions regarding liability while obviating the need to expend significant Court resources to proceed with a jury trial on damages in these civil actions. And, by focusing on the Liability Finding and Apple's appeal, the parties have fashioned a settlement that accounts for the fact that the viability of any damages award would be dependent on the outcome of the appeal of the Liability Finding. The proposed settlement addresses this important procedural posture while weighing the potential outcomes and risks involved in further proceedings.

The Plaintiffs, in conjunction with Apple, also request the Court to defer notice to consumers of the settlement until resolution of Apple's appeal of the Liability Finding. Deferring notice guarantees that when consumers receive notice of this settlement, the total recovery will be known. Rather than being presented with a list of hypothetical alternative settlement amounts, a consumer will be able to make the informed decision whether to remain an Eligible Consumer or exclude himself or herself from the settlement based on a known recovery.

This pragmatic settlement is the result of hard-fought litigation between the parties and months of negotiations among sophisticated counsel, as well as multiple mediation sessions, both with an officer of this Court and a highly respected private mediator. Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court preliminarily approve the settlement, and order that notice to consumers be deferred until the applicable settlement amount is known.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A. Plaintiffs' Investigations

As was previously detailed for this Court,<sup>6</sup> the States of Texas and Connecticut, beginning in April 2010, conducted a two-year investigation to determine if Apple Inc. and E-book publishers had entered into an unlawful conspiracy in violation of state and federal antitrust laws. The investigation was coordinated with a separate investigation simultaneously conducted by the United States Department of Justice ("DOJ").

Class Counsel also began its investigation in April 2010, after market prices for the publisher defendants' E-books increased 30 to 50 percent nearly simultaneously. This highly suspicious pricing behavior caused Class Counsel to retain experts and investigators to analyze the market and defendants' pricing behavior.

B. Litigation to Date

Class Counsel first filed civil litigation in this matter as Petru, et al. v. Apple Inc., et al., No. 11-cv-03892-EMC (N.D. Cal.). On December 9, 2011, the United States Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation transferred all related class actions to the Southern District of New York as In re Electronic Books Antitrust Litigation, No. 11-md-02293 (S.D.N.Y.) ("Class Action"). Thereafter, this Court appointed Hagens Berman Sobol Shapiro LLP and Cohen Milstein Sellers & Toll PLLC as co-lead counsel for the plaintiff classes. Plaintiff States' Original Complaint was filed on April 11, 2012, in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas and then transferred to the Southern District of New York as Texas, et al., v. Penguin Group (USA) Inc., et al., No. 12-cv-003394 (S.D.N.Y.) on April 30, 2012 ("Plaintiff

Hachette Book Group, Inc. et al.*, No.12-cv-6625 (S.D.N.Y.), States' Memoranda for Preliminary and Final Approval of the Hachette, HarperCollins and Simon and Schuster settlements (ECF Nos.11 and 68) and Texas, et al., v. Penguin Group (USA) Inc., et al., No. 12-cv-3394, Plaintiffs' Memoranda for Preliminary and Final Approval of Macmillan and Penguin settlements (ECF Nos. 235 and 452).

States' Action").<sup>7</sup> Both Plaintiff States' and Class's Complaints allege that Apple and five major E-book publishers entered into a successful and unlawful conspiracy to raise and fix the prices of E-books to consumers.

In conjunction with the DOJ, the parties began several months of coordinated discovery. Plaintiffs obtained and analyzed more than 1.6 million documents and detailed transactional data from the defendants and third parties, conducted more than 50 depositions, and engaged expert economists to analyze economic evidence of a conspiracy and calculate damages therefrom. On July 10, 2013, following a three-week bench trial in the DOJ and Plaintiff States' Actions, the Court issued its Liability Finding, concluding that "Apple conspired to restrain trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and relevant state statutes to the extent those laws are congruent with Section 1."<sup>8</sup>

On September 5, 2013, the Court entered injunctions against Apple in the DOJ and Plaintiffs States' actions.<sup>9</sup> On October 14, 2013, Apple filed notices of appeal of the Liability Finding and the entry of the injunctions. These appeals have been consolidated in the Second Circuit Court of Appeals as United States v. Apple Inc., No 13-3741 ("Liability Appeal").

Beginning in the fall of 2013, the Parties engaged in extensive additional discovery on the appropriate measure of damages suffered by consumers as a result of Apple's illegal conduct and on issues raised as to whether the class should be certified. The Court granted class certification on March 28, 2014, and ordered that notice of the litigation against Apple be sent to consumers. A jury trial to assess the amount of damages was scheduled to begin August 25, 2014, in the Plaintiff States and Class Actions. Both the dissemination of consumer notices and the damages trial have been suspended pending the Court's review and approval of the Apple Settlement.

C. Settlement Negotiations

The Attorneys General of 55 jurisdictions reached settlements with Hachette Book Group, Inc., HarperCollins Publishers LLC, and Simon & Schuster, Inc., which were approved by the Court on February 8, 2013.<sup>10</sup> Settlements among Plaintiffs, Holtzbrinck Publishers, LLC d/b/a Macmillan and Penguin Group (USA) Inc., were approved by the Court on December 6, 2013.<sup>11</sup> An additional settlement between Class Counsel representing residents of Minnesota and Hachette, HarperCollins, and Simon & Schuster was also approved on December 6, 2013. (Collectively, "Prior Settlements").

Settlement discussions among Plaintiffs and Apple did not occur until both sides had fully developed their factual understanding of the case. Although Plaintiff States offered to discuss settlement with Apple before and after the filing of their Complaint, no substantive negotiations occurred. The Court ordered Plaintiff States, DOJ, and Apple into mediation with the Honorable Kimba M. Wood, U.S. District Judge for the Southern District of New York, a month before the June 2013 trial was scheduled to begin. Class Plaintiffs also participated in this May 21, 2013, mediation but no settlement was reached.

After the Court issued its Liability Finding, the Court again directed the parties to mediate on the remaining issues. The parties agreed to mediation and retained the widely respected and experienced mediator, Antonio Piazza. This mediation, scheduled for two days in November 2013, was terminated after one day when the Parties were unable to reach an agreement. While preparing the scheduling Order for the damages trial, the Court asked the parties to return to mediation and they did so with Mr. Piazza in May 2014. While the parties did not reach agreement during the May mediation, the session provided the foundation for additional, serious negotiations resulting in the execution of a Memorandum of Understanding on June 16, 2014. Counsel for Plaintiff States, Settlement Class, and Apple immediately began work to finalize the Apple Settlement, using the Prior Settlements as a template. Counsel for the parties executed the Apple Settlement Agreement on July 10, 2014.<sup>12</sup>

III. THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

The Settlement Agreement with Apple contemplates compensation payments to consumers, as well as separate payments to Plaintiff States and to Class Counsel. However, as more fully described below, these payments are contingent upon the final outcome of Apple's appeal of the Court's Liability Finding. Apple will also pay the administration costs incurred to finalize the settlement and will receive releases of claims.

A. Payment Contingencies Defined

Depending on the outcome of the pending appeal of the Liability Finding, settlement payments by Apple will be as follows:

1. Affirmance of Liability Finding. If the Court's Liability Finding is affirmed, and that decision is final,<sup>13</sup> Apple will pay $400 million into a consumer compensation escrow account established by Plaintiffs' Escrow Agent.<sup>14</sup> Apple will also pay $20 million to Plaintiff States, and $30 million to Class Counsel.
2. Remand of Liability Finding. If the Liability Finding is either vacated and remanded, or reversed and remanded with instructions for reconsideration or for retrial, and that decision is final, Apple will pay $50 million into the

<sup>13</sup> All parties will have the right to appeal a decision related to the Liability Finding. Such decisions will be final as delineated in the Apple Settlement Agreement. (See Paragraph I.M).

<sup>14</sup> The Ohio Attorney General contracted with Fifth Third Bank to act as Escrow Agent in the Prior Settlements and will execute an addendum to incorporate the Apple Settlement Agreement funds.

consumer compensation escrow account. Apple will also pay $10 million to Plaintiff States and $10 million to Class Counsel. This contingency is not triggered by a remand on administrative or non-substantive grounds that could not implicate the Liability Finding. Under those circumstances, Apple is to make the payments described in Paragraph III.A.1, above.

3. Reversal of Liability Finding. If the Liability Finding is reversed, and that decision is final, Apple will make no payments for consumer compensation or to Plaintiff States or Class Counsel.

B. Distribution of Consumer Compensation

If payment is made for consumer compensation as set forth in A.1 or A.2, above, such monies will be distributed to natural-person consumers who purchased qualifying E-books from any settling publisher from April 1, 2010, to May 21, 2012 (“Eligible Consumers”). These funds, together with any accrued interest, will be distributed according to a Consumer Distribution Plan, as discussed in Section VI. The escrow funds are intended to be qualified settlement funds within the meaning of Treas. Reg. Sections 1.468B-1, et seq.

C. Payment to Plaintiff States

If payment is made to Plaintiff States as set forth in A.1 or A.2, above, for attorneys’ fees, investigation and litigation costs and for release of enforcement claims, such funds will be divided among the Plaintiff States as agreed among themselves for several delineated purposes as listed in the Apple Settlement Agreement.

D. Payment to Class Counsel

If payment to Class Counsel for attorneys’ fees and expenses is triggered under A.1 or A.2, above, Class Counsel will submit a fee petition for Court approval.

E. Payment of Settlement Notice and Administration Costs

Apple will pay all reasonable costs to administer the Apple Settlement including costs of the consumer notice and distribution program. Within ten (10) business days of the execution of the Apple Settlement, Apple will make a payment of $2 million into an administrative costs escrow account at Fifth Third Bank. Apple will make a supplemental deposit upon notice by counsel for Plaintiffs that additional funds are necessary for settlement administration costs. Any funds not ultimately expended from this account will be returned to Apple.

F. Release of Claims

After Apple has made the required payments, if any, and after the Effective Date of the Settlement has passed, Apple will be released from all Claims (as defined in the Settlement Agreement) that were asserted or could have been asserted on behalf of all Eligible Consumers who have not excluded themselves from the Apple Settlement. At that time, each Plaintiff State shall be deemed to have also released all Claims that were asserted or could have been asserted in the Second Amended Complaint by each Attorney General in his or her sovereign capacity as chief law enforcement officer of the state, except for Plaintiff States' claims for injunctive relief against Apple, which are currently under appeal in the Liability Appeal.

IV. THE SETTLEMENT MEETS THE STANDARDS FOR PRELIMINARY APPROVAL

Attorneys General of Plaintiff States brought their lawsuit in their capacities as parens patriae under Section 4C of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15c. Class Counsel brought their action under the authority of Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, and as a class action pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Settlements in such actions require judicial approval, which will be given if the Court concludes the settlements are fair, reasonable and adequate.<sup>15</sup>

This approval process begins with the Court granting preliminary approval. Preliminary approval does not require a full fairness hearing. Rather, “[w]here the proposed settlement appears to be the product of serious, informed, non-collusive negotiations, has no obvious deficiencies, does not improperly grant preferential treatment to class representatives or segments of the class, and falls within the range of possible approval, preliminary approval is granted.”<sup>16</sup> “Preliminary approval of such settlements, in contrast to final approval, ‘is at most a determination that there is what might be termed “probable cause” to submit the proposal to class members and hold a full-scale hearing as to its fairness.’”<sup>17</sup>

The Apple Settlement clearly meets these requirements for preliminary approval. All counsel are extremely well-informed, particularly given the fact that a trial on liability and on related claims for injunctive relief was conducted in 2013. The parties have been heavily engaged in preparing for a damages trial to occur in the summer of 2014, including thorough discovery of each other’s damages experts. Settlement negotiations and mediation were conducted before the liability trial and continued subsequent to the Liability Finding. Each side has fully articulated its positions on numerous occasions.

This Settlement has no “obvious deficiencies” nor does it grant preferential treatment. Consumers will be compensated using the same formula approved in the Prior Settlements: a modified pro rata distribution depending on whether a consumer purchased a New York Times Bestseller, or non-New York Times Bestseller book title. All Eligible Consumers will be reimbursed the same per-book amounts. Consumer benefit from consumer compensation is maximized because such funds will be used solely to pay Eligible Consumers throughout the United States. Any payment to Plaintiff States or Class Counsel will be paid in addition to any consumer compensation payment.<sup>18</sup> Apple will also separately bear the administrative costs of settlement.

Importantly, the potential payments all fall well within the range of possible approval. The parties – each represented by experienced antitrust counsel – agreed upon a set of contingencies which takes into account the litigation risks associated with the appeal of the Court’s Liability Finding, as well as the risks associated with continuing to litigate damages through a jury trial and probable appeal.

The unique posture of this multi-faceted litigation (civil actions by the DOJ, by the State Attorneys General and by Class Plaintiffs), combined with the various procedural complexities of the litigation, supports the proposed settlement. Plaintiffs firmly believe in the merits of their case, and in each of the legal positions they have advocated. They believe the evidence clearly established Apple’s liability under Section 1 of the Sherman Act and that the Court’s Liability Finding is correct. Plaintiffs further believe that a final damages award against Apple would be significant - in the range of $500 to $625 million, after a jury award has been trebled and offset by the $166 million from the Prior Settlements.

But Plaintiffs also recognize litigation outcomes are uncertain and risks exist associated with:

- the amount of damages a jury would ultimately award;
- any appeal of the jury damages award; and
- the numerous additional grounds for appeal asserted by Apple in connection with the Court’s rulings on class certification, exclusion of expert opinions, limitations on discovery, the scope of parens patriae authority, and disputes regarding venue for trial.

<sup>18</sup> A separate fund for payment of attorneys’ fees provides the beneficiaries of the settlement greater certainty because the amount of money each will receive is not reduced by an award of attorneys’ fees. In re Vitamins Antitrust Litig., No. 99-197 (TFH), 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8931, at *21 n.3 (D.D.C. Mar. 31, 2000).

Given these risks, the settlement terms are very favorable for consumers. If the Court's Liability Finding is affirmed, as Plaintiffs believe will happen, Apple's $400 million consumer payment will represent more than 140 percent of maximum estimated single damages and, when combined with the consumer payments from the Prior Settlements, return consumers more than two times their damages. This is an extraordinary outcome rarely seen in antitrust cases.

If the Liability Finding is reversed and remanded or vacated and remanded with instructions, for retrial or for reconsideration, Apple will pay $50 million to consumers, representing more than 17 percent of maximum estimated single damages. Combined with monies already received from Prior Settlements with publisher defendants, consumers will recover slightly more than 77 percent of single damages. This payment contingency is a reasonable appraisal of the possible consequences of a negative ruling from the Second Circuit or the Supreme Court. Such a ruling could put Plaintiffs in a more difficult litigation posture and significantly alter both the nature of the evidence to be considered and the legal standard to be applied thereto. These additional litigation risks, as well as the risk of a jury determination of damages, render this contingent consumer payment also well within the range for possible approval. Finally, if the Liability Finding is reversed and the case dismissed, consumers will receive nothing from this settlement, just as they would if no settlement were reached or approved.

As set forth above, the settlement negotiations and substantive terms of the Apple Settlement meet all requirements necessary for the Settlement Agreement to receive preliminary approval.

V. CONSUMER NOTICE

A. Recommendation to Provide Notice to Consumers After the Outcome of the Liability Finding Appeal is Known

Typically, after preliminary approval is granted, notice to affected consumers is provided relatively quickly and according to a Court-approved Notice Plan. However, Plaintiffs and Apple jointly recommend that consumer notices in this case be distributed after the Final Liability Decision has issued. By deferring the notice until then, Eligible Consumers will be provided with more precise information that should substantially reduce the possibility of consumer confusion. If Apple is required to make a payment, deferred notice would allow Eligible Consumers to know the total amount of consumer compensation to be paid by Apple (whether $400 million, or $50 million), as well as the amount of the per-book compensation. Equipped with these facts, Eligible Consumers will be better able to make a fully-informed decision whether to remain a part of, or opt out of, the settlement. In contrast, if consumers receive notice now, when the outcome is uncertain, they will not have the same clarity as to their expected compensation. Counsel negotiated this proposed timing of notice on behalf of consumers as the preferred way to educate Eligible Consumers.

In addition, distributing notice after the outcome of the Final Liability Decision is known may allow Plaintiffs to aggregate undistributed consumer compensation from the Prior Settlements with any consumer compensation amount paid by Apple, thereby maximizing the consumer distributions.<sup>19</sup>

<sup>19</sup> The residue amount from the Prior Settlements will not be known until after the expiration date for redemption of credits and checks on March 25, 2015.

Scheduling the distribution of notice of this settlement as proposed above is well within the discretion of this Court.<sup>20</sup> In general, settlement notice, like class certification notice, “should be sent as soon as practicable...”<sup>21</sup> But “the court may decide to postpone giving formal notice under Rule 23(c)(2) if there is a reason for the delay and it would not prejudice those class members who are not before the court.”<sup>22</sup> Courts may defer giving notice until after discovery has taken place,<sup>23</sup> where “one party may be harmed by the notice,”<sup>24</sup> or, potentially, where “[d]eferred notice will allow [settlement] negotiations a full and fair opportunity to proceed.”<sup>25</sup> While acknowledging that a court can combine class certification notice and settlement notice where settlement came after certification, the Rule 23 advisory committee notes point out that a “decision to remain in the class is likely to be more carefully considered and is better informed when settlement terms are known.”<sup>26</sup> Similarly, pursuant to Section 4c of the Clayton Act, the timing of the notice to be given in a parens patriae case is subject to the court’s discretion.<sup>27</sup> Here, Eligible Consumers will be best informed after the Final Liability Decision is rendered.

B. Description of Anticipated Notice Plan

Plaintiffs anticipate that notice for the Apple Settlement will conform, in large measure, to the Notice Plans used in the Prior Settlements. Plaintiffs also intend to continue using the same notice and claims administrators – Rust Consulting, Inc. and Kinsella Media LLC – to disseminate notice of the Apple Settlement. However, because timing of deferred notice is unknown and could be more than a year in the future, Plaintiffs believe a Notice Plan (and the accompanying notices), should be submitted for Court approval only after the Final Liability Decision has issued. Plaintiffs can then update the Notice Plans used in the Prior Settlements to ensure that the most inclusive, informative notice can be provided, using the then-best means available.

The Notice Plans of the Prior Settlements were found by this Court to meet the requirements of due process, 15 U.S.C. §15, and Rule 23. They provided for direct email notice from retailers which accounted for more than 95% of eligible E-Book purchases. In the Prior Settlements, six retailers (Amazon, Barnes & Noble, Apple, Kobo, Sony, and Google) assisted in providing notice emails to the 23.27 million individual customers who purchased qualifying E-books. To assist with effective future notice of the Apple Settlement, four of these retailers (Amazon, Barnes & Noble, Kobo, and Google) have agreed to either maintain the contact information for Eligible Consumers in their own internal systems, or, should circumstances change, they will provide Counsel for Plaintiffs with notice and the opportunity to determine an alternative method of maintaining the information. For the two remaining retailers (Apple and Sony), the Claims Administrator has and will retain all necessary contact information for Eligible Consumers during the pendency of this litigation. Plaintiffs will also direct the Claims Administrator to allow Eligible Consumers to update their contact information through the settlement website during the pendency of this litigation to assure the best practicable notice to Eligible Consumers.<sup>28</sup> These procedures assure that direct notice will remain a viable option regardless of the length of time required for the exhaustion of appeals.

In the Prior Settlements, direct notice was supplemented with publication and internet notices, as well as a call center and a settlement website. The various notices informed Eligible Consumers of the proposed settlements and their rights thereunder, including the right to exclude themselves and the opportunity to be heard.<sup>29</sup> Plaintiffs believe a slightly modified version of the same Notice Plan and notices will similarly meet all necessary requirements for this Court's approval. Plaintiffs propose submitting a notice plan and draft notices for this Court's approval within 30 days of the Final Liability Decision.

VI. CONSUMER COMPENSATION DISTRIBUTION PLAN

A. Recommendation to Defer Submission of Distribution Plan

As with the Notice Plan, Plaintiffs believe submission of the Distribution Plan in this matter would best be postponed until after the contingencies have been decided. At that time, the Distribution Plan can include more complete and updated information. At the very least, a later-prepared Plan would allow for inclusion of the per-book amounts to be paid to consumers; a calculation that cannot be made before the Final Liability Decision is known. In addition, the Plan could potentially take advantage of technology not currently available for more efficient distribution for some or all of the participating retailers (including the automatic crediting of consumer accounts).

B. Description of Anticipated Distribution Plan

Plaintiffs will use the Distribution Plans approved by the Court and used in the Prior Settlements as the template for the Distribution Plan for the Apple Settlement.

The previous Distribution Plans required that all Eligible Consumers were treated equally, applying the same calculations, terms, conditions and limitations to all consumers. The prior Distribution Plans also provided for compensation on purchases of New York Times Bestseller E-books and non-New York Times Bestseller E-books proportionate to the estimated harm for each, a type of apportionment that has been repeatedly been deemed fair and reasonable by courts.<sup>30</sup> Plaintiffs expect the anticipated Distribution Plan, which will update the prior Distribution Plans to reflect the realities of the market at the time of distribution, will also meet with the Court's approval.

VII. THE CLASS SHOULD REMAIN CERTIFIED FOR SETTLEMENT PURPOSES

This Court has already exhaustively addressed the propriety of certifying a class, not only in its Class Certification Order, to which Apple objected, but also in its previous orders approving the Prior Settlements. As this Court noted, the decision to certify a class here was not a close call: "If certification were not appropriate here, no antitrust class action could be certified."<sup>31</sup> Notably, the Second Circuit denied Apple's petition for interlocutory appeal of the Class Certification Order.<sup>32</sup> None of the facts underlying these previous decisions have changed.

<sup>32</sup> Order, In re Electronic Books Antitrust Litig., No. 14-1092 (2d Cir. May 29, 2014), ECF No. 61.

A. Definition of the Proposed Apple Settlement Class

The proposed settlement class is the same as the class certified by the Court in the litigation, and in the Prior Settlements: all natural persons who purchased E-books published by Hachette, HarperCollins, Macmillan, Penguin, or Simon & Schuster, from April 1, 2010 through May 21, 2012, who resided in one of the following states, territories or commonwealths at the time of their E-book purchase: American Samoa, California, Florida, Georgia, Guam, Hawaii, Kentucky, Maine, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Northern Mariana Islands, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, U.S. Virgin Islands, Washington, and Wyoming. Excluded from the Class are Defendants, their employees, co-conspirators, officers, directors, legal representatives, heirs, successors, and wholly or partly owned subsidiaries of affiliated companies, as well as the Honorable Denise Cote and persons described in 28 U.S.C. § 455(b)(4)-(5). Except for geographical distinctions, this Class mirrors the Eligible Consumers of the parens patriae action.

B. The Class Meets the Prerequisites of Rule 23(a)

As already determined by this Court, the class meets the four requirements of Rule 23(a) – numerosity, commonality, typicality and adequacy.

1. Numerosity

The class here contains millions of consumers, easily meeting the first requirement of Rule 23(a). Apple has never disputed that numerosity exists here.<sup>33</sup>

2. Commonality

The Rule 23(a)(2) requirement of common questions of law or fact is “not a demanding standard” and “is established so long as the plaintiffs can identify some unifying thread among the [class] members' claims."<sup>34</sup> Here, "a host of common issues [exist] that will generate common answers in this litigation," including the impact of the Liability Opinion on issues to be litigated in the damages trial and the applicability of Dr. Noll's damages model.<sup>35</sup>

3. Typicality

Rule 23(a)(3) requires that "the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the claims or defenses of the class." Typicality "does not require 'that the factual background of each named plaintiff's claim be identical to that of all class members.'"<sup>36</sup> Rather, the named plaintiff's claims must "arise from the same course of events."<sup>37</sup> Here, the claims of the three class representatives arise from the same conduct as that of the class: "Apple's conspiracy with the Publisher Defendants to fix e-book prices, which caused the prices of e-books to rise."<sup>38</sup> Each class member will make similar arguments as to liability and damages. And each class member will make similar legal arguments regarding the extent to which collateral estoppel applies. Apple has not disputed the existence of typicality in this class.<sup>39</sup>

4. Adequacy

Rule 23(a)(4) requires that the "representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class."<sup>40</sup> This Court has previously found both the three representatives and class counsel to be qualified, experienced, and able to conduct this litigation.<sup>41</sup> Nothing has Supp. 2d 231, 242 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) ("Typicality refers to the nature of the claims of the representative, not the individual characteristics of the plaintiff[s]. Personal traits or variables . . . are irrelevant to the typicality criterion.").

changed to undermine this finding. Plaintiffs therefore request that this Court again appoint Anthony Petru, Thomas Friedman, and Shane S. Davis as the class representatives and confirm the appointment of Hagens Berman Sobol Shapiro LLP and Cohen Milstein Sellers & Toll PLLC as class counsel.

C. The Requirements of Rule 23(b)(3) Are Satisfied

The proposed class's claims also meet the standards of Rule 23(b)(3), which requires the plaintiff to show that questions of law or fact common to the members of the class predominate and that a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy.

1. Predominance

"In order to meet the predominance requirement of Rule 23(b)(3), a plaintiff must establish that the issues in the class action that are subject to generalized proof, and thus applicable to the class as a whole, . . . predominate over those issues that are subject only to individualized proof."<sup>42</sup> Predominance is readily shown "in certain cases alleging . . . violations of the antitrust laws."<sup>43</sup> And as this Court noted, this is precisely such a case where a single policy by the defendant has led to a commonality of the violation and the harm.<sup>44</sup> Here, "Apple conspired with the five Publisher Defendants to fix national e-book prices. Working together, the e-book prices of the Publisher Defendants rose precipitously and with one exception, simultaneously, after their adoption of Apple's Agreements."<sup>45</sup>

2. Superiority and Ascertainability

Rule 23(b)(3) also requires a finding that “a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy.” Where individual class members’ possible recoveries are so small that no other practical method of adjudication exists, superiority is often satisfied.<sup>46</sup> Here, as this Court has already found, where millions of class members have suffered injury, on average, of less than $7, a class action is the superior method for adjudicating these claims.<sup>47</sup>

The class is also readily ascertainable. Detailed transaction records exist for class members – records already used to notify and distribute funds from the settlements with the Publisher Defendants. Due to the existence of these digital transaction records, class members in this lawsuit are readily ascertainable.<sup>48</sup>

VIII. CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court (1) find that the Apple Settlement Agreement satisfies the requirements for preliminary approval; (2) grant preliminary approval of the Apple Settlement Agreement; (3) grant conditional class certification for settlement purposes; and (4) approve Plaintiffs’ request that notification to Eligible Consumers of the Apple Settlement be deferred until further order of the Court. A proposed Preliminary Approval Order for the Court’s consideration is appended as Exhibit C.
